Sportsmanship

Sportsmanship is the ability to accept graciously, winning and losing. It is the ability to know that life is made up of both successes and failures and to know that we must be able to deal with both. Sportsmanship is that attitude which projects the opponent as an equal not an enemy. Your rival is worthy of your respect and admiration. Sportsmanship is the ability to recognize the talents and abilities of others, even when it means accepting the fact that someone else is more proficient than ourselves. Sportsmanship is the courage to play the game within the rules. It is the ability to accept the decision of the officials and the coach without demonstrating inappropriate behavior. Sportsmanship allows the individual to be able to offer his/her hand in defeat in order to congratulate the opponent. Take your responsibility to be a good sport in a very serious manner.
